The MIC seminar in Singapore took place on 1 February 2012 at NTU. Emails have been sent to different schools of universities, polytechnics and industrial partners to inform them about the seminar and the contest. There are about 50 attendants present for the seminar. They are mostly engineering students (both undergraduate and postgraduate) and engineers (both academic institution and industry). During and after the seminar, many questions have been asked and some are quite enthusiastic about the potential application of nano-satellite mission and its future role.
